

MISSOURIAN WOULD CHANGE THE CAPITAL

Wants to put Washington in the Ozark Mountains.
NO MORE FREE GARDEN SEEDS—
GOOD NEWS FOR TOBACCO MEN.

Washington, March 6.—The removal of the capital of the United States to the Ozark Mountains in southwestern Missouri is the startling proposal made in a memorial introduced in the House of Representatives by its week by Mr. Shuman of Missouri. The communication comes from the editor of a small Missouri paper located at a microscopically undetectable point, and instructs the Representative in Congress to "show me" state to introduce bills for the transference of the seat of government as proposed, "for sanitary, economic and other reasons." The Honorable Mr. Elliott, who is responsible for the petition, urges the change especially for sanitary reasons, suggesting that "a great deal of the inefficiency and crookedness at Washington is attributable to the malarial condition of the atmosphere." Furthermore he does not like to have the capital located on one edge of the country, open to the attack of what he calls "the unfriendly powers of the old world," adding that if it were located in the Ozarks such an attack and the consequent destruction would be impossible. Germany might bombard Washington with her warships, but never a city buried in the mountains of Missouri. Congressmen have been quick to appreciate Mr. Elliott's thoughtfulness and sympathetic fears for their health and bodily safety, but at the same time they seem to prefer the depressing conditions and dangers of Washington to the attractions of Missouri. The petition has been buried in a convenient cubby hole of the District Committee, and it seems safe to assume that the government will continue to do business at the old stand for a few more years, at least.

The railroad rate question is fast outstripping all others in the Senate, and, if indications go for anything, will produce one of the liveliest debates of years. Already Senators Foraker and Holliver have made their opening speeches, even though the Hepburn bill will not come up for actual consideration until after March 9. The speech of Senator Foraker was a notable effort, which has created a profound impression. He criticized the Hepburn bill chiefly on the three points as follows:

"It authorizes the Commission to compel disagreeing railroads that have nothing in common except a physical connection, to operate jointly as through routes on such rates and terms as it may impose."

"It dispenses with jury trials in an important class of actions to recover money by providing a procedure that makes such trials impossible."

"It imposes such extreme, unreasonable and burdensome penalties as probably to invalidate the measure in that respect. It does not provide for a proper review by the courts of the orders of the commission, but seeks to exclude the same."

Senator Dooliver's speech in defense of the bill, although it was received with evident sympathy on account of his treatment by the hands of the committee, was hardly in the same class with Mr. Foraker's. Mr. Dooliver announced himself as opposed to any amendment of the measure, and there paid Mr. Foraker a compliment by stating that the Ohioan had produced a workable and satisfactory plan for those who believe in court review, and rather than vote for an amended version of the Hepburn bill, he would give his approval to Senator Foraker's measure. Indeed, it is hard to tell just how far this question of court review will complicate the already surprising situation. It is certain, however, that those Senators who believe that the law should be administered by the courts will make a strong stand for an amendment to this end.

According to reports received here, Japan was about to begin another war—but this time it will be against rats. A visitor from the Orient gives an extensive account of the campaign which is planned for the extermination of these rodents. While conditions are not like those in Hamelin town it is nevertheless deemed that the rats must go. Scientists have long been aware of the evil which rats work in the way of propagating contagious diseases, but it is only recently that they have realized the extent of this evil, after investigations in connection with the bubonic plague. To rats, far more than to any other cause, is attributed the spread of this scourge of the East. Not only does Japan propose to wage active warfare here, but it also her purpose to enlist other nations in the common cause of humanity.

No more will the Congressional packets of garden seeds go forth from rural and city Representatives to their admiring constituents in many states, if the action of the House on Agriculture is sustained by the House. The committee struck out of the bill the appropriation for this special service. The motion to put an end to the practice was made by Representative Cocks, who hails from the Long Island District in which the President lives. There is no doubt that a lively row will be precipitated in the House when the committee reports the bill for many Representatives regard the seed distribution as one of their vested rights.

Tobacco growers and sugar producers can now heave a sigh of relief, since the Senate Committee on the Philippines has defeated the Payne tariff bill by a vote of 8 to 5 in spite of the fact that this measure is passed the House by a vote of 38 to 11. Senators Carmack and McCleary, who were the five members of the committee voting for the bill. The tabling of Mr. McCleary's motion, made after the vote, that the bill be reported to the Senate adversely, effectively disposes of the measure, unless the chairman of the committee should appeal to the Senate by resolution, an extremely unlikely event.

Mr. Zint Marr and Miss Ivy Hawkins of this city surprised many of their friends by getting married Sunday. They had been coming together for some time, but no one had any idea they were contemplating matrimony just yet. Saturday afternoon they quietly boarded a train for Springfield where they were married, and then returned to Elizabethtown where they will spend several days visiting friends.

Mr. Marr is an employee of the L. & N. at this place, and Miss Hawkins is a deserving young lady with numerous friends.

NOT AFRAID OF GHOSTS IS HE.

Circuit Judge Gordon Willing to Save County Expense by Hanging in Court House.

Denies Giving Order, Though, and Disclaims Jurisdiction.

SHERIFF PREPARING TO BUILD ENCLOSURE AND SCAFFOLD NEAR JAIL.

Many Madisonville People Opposed to Thompsons Being Hung at all.

Who's afraid of Ghosts? Not Judge J. F. Gordon, who sits on the bench in the Hopkins Circuit Court. He was willing, so far as he was concerned, that the hanging of Garth Thompson, colored, convicted of the murder of William Brame at Madisonville Dec. 24, 1903, should take place right over his desk in the circuit court room, if necessary to save the county expense and at the same time to come within the requirements of the law requiring absolute privacy at hangings.

The matter of public expense is a thing of such vital and personal concern that all public officials, who are elected by the people, must think of that first in every case. And sometimes the looming of this giant shadow in the foreground warps the perspective, temporarily. This matter of "public expense," as generally viewed by the public, is excuse for a conversation that took place between Judge Gordon and Sheriff Jennings relative to holding the execution in the court room. But the story was sent out broadcast, that Judge Gordon had ordered the hanging to take place in the circuit court room.

And then it was found out "who's afraid?" The face of the clock in the tower turned pale and the teeth of every official with an office in the building chattered and chattered—except those in the sheriff's office, where everybody's brave. Deputy Sheriff Grady said to Sheriff Jennings: "You're making arrangements to erect the necessary enclosure and the scaffold on a lot somewhere near the jail, and that the hanging would not take place in either the circuit court room or the City Hall building."

The popular revolution at Madisonville against a hanging occurring in any public building, it is learned, from numerous sources, has developed the fact that very many of Madisonville's best citizens would much prefer that no hanging occur. They look upon the ignorance of the criminal and the prosecution for the crime and the execution of the crime to an extent that the popular mind now seems, at the county seat, to oppose largely a legal killing.

The date for the hanging is fixed upon Friday, March 16th. The Sheriff has the specifications for the gallows and has his plans laid to complete his part of the arrangement in good time before the hour of execution. The public has knowledge of any movement for respite or stay of sentence and all the probabilities are that unless death intervenes Thompsons will hang on the day now fixed for his execution.

Death of Pneumonia.

The death of R. P. Blackwell, of 315 William street, Chattanooga, Tenn., occurred at Bridgeport, Ala., Saturday after an illness of two days' duration of pneumonia, while on a visit to relatives. Mr. Blackwell was about 48 years of age and the father of Claude Blackwell, of this city, who with two brothers survive him. Interment took place at Rocky Springs, Ala., Monday.

Judge Durrell Will be Toastmaster.

ANOTHER CONFESSION.

Substantiates the Orchard Confession in Steunenberg Murder Case.

Boise, Ida., March 3.—The Statesman says: "We are authorized to announce that Steve Adams, arrested at Haines, Ore., on February 20, in connection with the Steunenberg assassination, has made a full and sweeping confession."

"This second confession is far more important than that made by Harry Orchard. This statement was made by James McPeckard, the detective, last evening in the presence of Gov. Gooding and J. H. Hawley, who is in charge of the prosecution."

"Mr. McPeckard added that Adams' confession is fully and exactly corroborated by that of Orchard in every point touched on by both."

"Moreover, McPeckard continued, Adams knows far more of the workings of the inner circle than Orchard did, and was able to give a mass of detailed information that Orchard's confession did not cover. The confession of Adams, he said, corroborated that given by Orchard in every substantial point connected with the assassination of Gov. Steunenberg. Adams, however, was not at Caldwell at the time of the assassination, nor was Orchard at the time of the unsuccessful effort in November. The man who assisted Orchard on that latter occasion, as set forth in Orchard's confession, was Jack Stimpkins."

Homes Wanted for Kentucky Boys and Girls.

The Kentucky Home Society has sixty boys and girls between the ages of three and nine for whom they desire good Christian homes. These children are unusually bright and attractive and we guarantee that no family will be disappointed in a child we send them.

The winter months have given us an enormous amount of work to do. We are receiving more children now in a month than we formerly did in a year and as a rule, the children are much brighter and much better looked after than those we formerly had.

Will you not show your interest in this great work for humanity by giving a home to one of these little ones? Unless you have a first class home in every respect and unless you are moral and stand well in your community, do not apply, as we will, and no circumstances can place a child in a home unless it can get the very best advantages. This is the Master's work, inasmuch as he said "Suffer little children to come unto me, for such are the kingdom of heaven." If you are interested in this charity, and would like to take a child, please address the Kentucky Children's Home Society, No. 214 Yon Borries Avenue, Louisville.

Yours very respectfully,
GEORGE L. SENOX,
State Supt.

Robert Hale Seriously Ill.

CIRCUIT COURT ADJOURNS.

Circuit Judge Gordon Left for Princeton Monday—Will Return in May.

FOR A FOUR WEEKS' TERM.

Judge Gordon of the Circuit Court, at Madisonville Monday heard arguments in and overruled motions for new trials in the following cases: Harry Brown vs. the L. & N. R. R., Daniel Porter vs. I. Bailey, Louis Bark vs. Nortonville Coal Co., Cleveland Sisk vs. Daniel Boone Coal Co., Lillian A. Trendle vs. Buffalo Creek Coal Co., and Z. H. Hogue vs. Buffalo Creek Coal Co.

Bills of exceptions were then filed in each of these cases and appeals to the Court of Appeals will be taken as soon as Mr. Gatlin can make transcripts of the records.

Quite a number of judgments and decrees were rendered in cases pending on the equity docket and commissioner's reports filed and deeds made. Various accounts against the Commonwealth were allowed of officers for services under felonious prosecutions.

A large number of divorces were granted at this term of court to dissatisfied husbands and wives.

For the first time in many years there was no disagreement of the jury in any case, and this is the more remarkable considering the large number of cases tried.

The docket has been cleared of a great many cases long standing and it is probable that the business of the court will be in much better shape at the next term.

The trustee of the jury fund filed reports of fines and forfeitures and settlements with the jurors and after the usual formalities Court was adjourned, Judge Gordon going to Princeton for a two week's term in Caldwell county.

RAILROAD WORK TO BEGIN SOON

Line from Central City to Earles. Grading Promised this Month.

Col. W. L. Gordon, while here Tuesday, said that the Midland railroad, from Central City to Earles, would begin grading within the next few days. His estimate was that it would be completed in a very short while and that they would be laid as soon as grading got well under way. The energy of the contractors will be first directed to tunnelling a hill some seven miles out of Central City, which is perhaps the most difficult part of the work. Col. Gordon thinks the road will be built without delay and later extended to Madisonville.

The other proposition to construct a railroad from Dawson Springs to Madisonville seems to be in a quietest state just now, but there are those who believe this line will also be constructed at some future time.

And then the knowing ones say, "If we get all this additional road built at this place up and developed, where will we send the coal?" The answer would be a gentlemen was, "maybe sometime we'll send it through the Panama Canal, but to what point beyond that we will not say, some one else." The question of probable markets enters into all serious discussion of these things.

Mrs. Woodruff Dead.

Mrs. Annie Woodruff, wife of William Woodruff a prominent citizen of St. Charles, died at her home Saturday evening after long illness of a complication of diseases. Mrs. Woodruff was a daughter of J. M. Nisbet, of Madisonville, and was beloved by many friends for her good qualities. The funeral services were held Monday afternoon at Grapewine cemetery.

OVERLAND MARCH FOR STATE MILITIA.

Kentucky Soldiers Will Take Part in Manoeuvres in Indiana this Summer.

South Bend, Ind., March 5.—Semi-official information has reached South Bend, Ind., officers of the Indiana National Guard that orders will be issued in a few days by the War Department to prepare for mobilization of Federal troops and National Guardsmen during the coming summer. Camp will be established at Fort Benjamin Harrison, two miles northeast of Lawrence, this State. The camp will represent the Department of the Lakes, with Brig. Gen. Funston in command. The Department includes Wisconsin, Illinois, Michigan, Indiana, Ohio and Kentucky. The National Guardsmen of these States will join the regulars of the Department at camp.

The tentative plan is that the National Guard of the States shall come and go, that is one State will have its militia with regulars two or three weeks and then the militia of another State will come in for a like stay. The regulars at all posts and barracks within the geographical limits of the Department of the Lakes will be assembled at Indianapolis. It is proposed to bring them into camp about the middle of May or the first of June and keep them there three months. Every command of regulars within the limit of the Department will be marched to Fort Benjamin Harrison, and it is also proposed that the National Guards of the States within the boundaries of the Department shall come overland to the great camp.

Bailey and Mrs. James Waltrip, all of Madisonville.

Clay and Breckinridge for Statuary Hall.
The Washington Star, in an editorial on Kentucky in Statuary Hall, says:

"Mr. Watterson suggests Henry Clay and John C. Breckinridge, and there's much to support the selection. Gen. Breckinridge was a man of great force himself, and represented, moreover, a family of the highest distinction in the State. The Breckinridges were among the first-comers, helped to shape things, held the most important offices, and stamped their character and abilities on the new institutions. This action of the stock made rapid progress in public life, and after Mr. Clay's death was probably the most influential man in the State. He was greatly admired by the young men, and led a large number of them into the Confederate army."
"One could wish to see Gen. Breckinridge accompany Mr. Clay here for the additional reason that in the hands of a competent sculptor he should make up admirably and impressively in marble. He was one of the handsomest men of his day, and, whether afoot or on horseback, carried himself superbly. His figure in Statuary Hall would be surely among the most striking displayed there."

Constitution Ignored.

The constitution is utterly ignored when politicians imagine they need a new perruquander. But until we have fair elections in Kentucky it does not matter how openly the principle of equal representation is ignored.—Louisville Post.

LOCOMOTIVE BLASTS

Takes Our Locomotives.

According to the New York Sun, an American locomotive works has in process 100 locomotives for Japan, which were intended to be built in Great Britain. Specifications were drawn for British engines. Two American firms were allowed to estimate, in the hope that they would not care to submit prices for only twenty out of the 100 required. The Americans were anxious to get into Japan and decided to incur large expenditure for special patterns, so they put in a figure for twenty machines and a lower figure for 100. The British makers were higher, but they had a "pull," and they worked it. It was decided that an order should go to England for eighty machines and to the United States for twenty. Then the Japanese decided that the 100 locomotives must be in hand within a fixed time. The Americans agreed to put the 100 locomotives into Japan two months earlier than the time stipulation. The British makers wanted eight months longer than the time fixed by the Japanese. As a result the whole order came to America. The same Japanese road, after trying to get some steel cars made in Wales within a certain period, found it impossible, and the order will go to Pennsylvania.

All forms of transportation except the regular two-cent rate provided by law, will be cut off by the railroads in Ohio. This decision has been reached at a conference of passenger representatives of all railroads with lines in that State. It was agreed that by eliminating everything except the two-cent fare the roads could in a measure, recompense themselves for the loss caused by the new rate law. The action contemplated will deprive Ohioans of all reduced transportation for conventions; of the 1,000 mile books; of all charity business and of all round trip rates and clergymen's rates. Dear Sirs:—It is a source of pleasure for me to permit you to use my picture before and after cured by "ZEMO," and to tell what "ZEMO" did for me. I doctored this case of (Acne) pimples for six years and spent several hundred dollars with physicians and specialists. The more salves and creams I used, the worse my face became. Mr. Ira Blackman recommended "ZEMO." Right bottles entirely cured me, and I honestly believe

"ZEMO" is the best remedy in the world for any

But we are not satisfied. We feel there are still greater things possible. As our business grows in value we will be able to cut down our percentage of profit, and our strong desire is to do the "greatest amount of business" on the smallest margin of profit of any store in Hopkins county. With this end in view we have moved our prices down to the lowest possible point. Come and visit the "Big Busy Store" and let us show you what we have. MISSISSIPPI TORNADO DESTROYS AND KILLS

TWENTY-FOUR DEAD, 46 INJURED AND PROPERTY VALUED AT $1,500,000 DESTROYED.

Tornado Struck City Without Warning, Fire Following and adding to Horror of the Situation—Mills and Citizens Combined to Fight the Flames and Rescue Unfortunates From the Ruins—Negro Quarter Suffered Severely.

Meridian, Miss., is a beautifully laid out city, built along modern public utilities. It is near the eastern boundary of the state, only about fifteen miles from the Alabama line, and is reached by five lines of railway. The chief industries of the city are machinery and woodworking, with one large cotton mill, while its commerce is largely predicated upon cotton, fruit and vegetables, the surrounding country being most fertile, but peopled by a sturdy class that is strongly wedded to the south's growing white staple. Because of its excellent distributive facilities, it is the center of a broad trade territory, and numbers among its mercantile establishments some of the largest jobbing concerns in the south, especially dry goods and groceries.

Meridian, Miss., March 3.—A tornado struck this city Friday evening about 6 o'clock, coming from the southwest, killing 24 people, injuring 46 and wrecking property valued at $1,500,000. Fire followed, and a number of people were incinerated. The lightning plant was destroyed, and the city was in darkness, save for the glare of the flames.

Those burned to death were almost all negroes, the tornado being severe in the section inhabited by them. Philanthropic company was called out and they and citizens did noble work. Gov. Vardaman arrived to-day. Neighboring towns and cities offered assistance, which was accepted. Gov. Vardaman issued an appeal to Mississippians for aid. All contributions should be sent to Col. H. M. Street, chairman of relief committee, Meridian, Miss.

Meridian, Miss., March 6.—Before an army of determined men attacking Meridian's storm-wrecked and debris-strewn streets, the vast amount of wreckage is giving way slowly but surely. The soldiers following the disastrous storm of Friday was a day of of Meridian had never protected themselves with storm or cyclone insurance, so insurance agents will have little or no auditing beyond the fire losses. A million and a quarter dollars is now thought to be a conservative estimate of the damage wrought.

The storm performed its worst work on Front street and in the Georgetown and Fowell survey suburbs. On Front street the principal wholesale houses were located. The Georgetown community is inhabited chiefly by cotton factory employees, while the Fowell survey is the residence district for employees of the railroad shops.

Scores of Homes Wrecked.
Fifteen buildings on Front street are wrecked. The fertilizer factory, electric light plant and cotton mills are in ruins, while 500 residences in the path of the storm were either unroofed or totally destroyed.

Passing from southwest to northeast, after striking the Queen & Crescent freight depot and utterly demolishing that structure, the cloud diverted its course somewhat and passed along Front street, its outer edge also touching Front street, where quite a number of buildings were greatly damaged.

Feed Per Day For Cows.

There is no doubt that different kinds of food might make some difference in the number of feeds required in a day for the best preservation of the cow's health and the greatest production of milk she is capable of affording, writes J. W. Ingham in American Cultivator. It is well known that some foods are digested more quickly than others and possess less nutritive qualities and therefore should be fed oftener for the comfort of the cow and the most profit of the dairyman.

Some cows have stronger digestive powers than others, and consequently their stomachs have done their work and are ready to receive another meal sooner. Green, tender grass, roots, pumpkins and apples will be digested sooner than hay, corn fodder and grain. A cow of vigorous digestion, fed on food that is easily digested and not overstrong in nourishment, might get hungry oftener and do better on three meals a day, but the generality of cows fed on dry feed, hay, cornstalks, silage, cornmeal and bran are, according to my experience, less dairy and particularly about their food eat with a greater relish and do better in the long run with but two feeds per day.

Successes for Hogs.

No animal was ever intended to subsist alone on dry, concentrated foods, writes an Illinois farmer in American Agriculturist. What the hog needs along with concentrated ration, with the opportunity to provide him with clover, rape, beets, artichoke, silage, etc. There is no reason why he should be abandoned to the conditions which invite disease and death.

There is not a month of the year when an occasional succulent ration would not be provided for the hog. This with pure water would enable him to resist and throw off the germs and disease always prevalent and sufficiently frequent to kill when subjected to conditions inviting death.

Feeding Cows.

For cows lead the list of feeding stuffs, but shorts and bran and barley peas and some corn may be profitably used where economy is important. Steamed crushed oats or barley thickened with bran will prove very nourishing or appetizing where cows are suffering from teething. A limited quantity of cooked roots mixed with ground grain and bran, given at night in winter time, daily or two or three times a week, will show in a more thrifty general appearance.

Salt on Asparagus.

Increased yields of asparagus are secured at the Arkansas experiment station by applying common salt at the rate 1,000 pounds to the acre. Salted asparagus produce 184 per cent more than the unsalted. Salt was applied the preceding summer and the following season salt was again put on at the rate of two pounds per square yard, applications at intervals of twenty days.

Location of the Stable.

The dairymen who has his stable located on an elevation where he secure good drainage has something to be thankful for. Those who have not good drainage should immediately improvise some method for keeping their stables dry under the floors. The product of the cows as well as their health makes this imperative.

Measuring Land.

A handy tool for measuring land is made from an old buggy wheel fitted to a light frame. Measure the tire and mark a point in the rim so that the revolutions of the wheel can be counted. Walk around the piece of land with the wheel and multiply the number of revolutions by the measure of the tire.

Frost and the Soil.

Frosts, especially early spring frosts, are great pulverizers of refractory soils, beating any tool yet invented for this purpose. Soil thus comminuted and pulverized liberates plant food, and this explains why fall plowing of the land will in most cases produce better crops than land plowed in the spring.

Worms in Turkeys.

Feed turkeys afflicted with worms a meal of dry, stale bread, and yet mixed with sour milk and a quantity of crushed garlic bulb. Give this as first feed in the morning or after they have fasted over one or two meals.

Removing Stumps.

A correspondent of American Cultivator states that he removed a troublesome tree stump from near his house in the following manner: With an inch-angar he bored a hole in the center of the stump ten inches deep and put into it about one-half pound of oil of vitriol and corked the whole stump and roots, extending through all their ramifications, were so rotted that they were easily eradicated.

Keep Fertility in the Land.

Good farming today is intensive farming. Raise all it is possible to raise, but put back into the soil every year as the crop takes out, or more. New land will stand a lot of abuse, but it will go back on you in time. You can depend on that. Farm every year so that you leave your land in better shape at the close than at the beginning of the year.—Kinsball's Dairy Farmer.

Improving the Wood Lot.

If a little care and forethought are taken when cutting the year's supply of fuel to thin out in the thicker places, saving the young and thrifty trees, letting in the sunshine occasionally to start a vigorous growth and perhaps trimming the trunks to get smoother growth, it will be surprising to see how much the stump value is increased.—American Cultivator.

Peas for Lambs.

Three years ago," says R. W. Hersey of Colorado, "an old Scotchman living in the San Luis valley, in our State, concluded he would experiment with peas as a food for his lambs that he owned."

The pea diet proved to be the thing. The lambs not only took on fat with surprising rapidity, but their flesh acquired a new and delicious flavor. The next year everybody in that region began to follow his example, and last year in the San Luis valley it is estimated that no less than 500,000 sheep grew fat on peas."

Eat Spinach.

Eat plenty of spinach. It acts as a tonic and beautifier. Good soap, soft water, plenty of fruit, early hours and a daily walk in all weather. Bathe the face every night with equal parts of warm milk and water. It keeps the skin fair and smooth. When washing the hair is necessary, harmless shampoos should be chosen. The simplest can always be made at home: melt a cake of castile soap in a quart of warm water. Put it into a wide-mouthed jar and use about two tablespoons at a time. Massage well into the scalp.

To Clean Straw Mattings.

To clean straw matting that is very much soiled, use two quarts of oxalic acid (poison) has been dissolved. This will remove both dirt and stains if applied with a scrubbing brush. Wash carefully afterward, and your matting will look as good as new.

Lucy Hencocks.

When the brooding hen refuses to voluntarily return to her coop at night, but squats outside, you can be pretty sure that the coop is either fearfully lousy, filthy or close or perhaps all three. Investigate.

Feeding the Pigs.

Clean out the hog troughs every day if necessary. Troughs half full of litter do not make very desirable places for the pigs to eat out of.
